BolteLang at LISTE 09
Booth 3 | 1 | 1

BolteLang's presentation is a thematic hang of new works by three gallery artists, Daniel Gustav Cramer, Swantje Hielscher and Vanessa Billy in conjunction with invited artist Katharina Kamph. Their selected works share an engagement with paper, the ubiquitous art material, which these artists use as both medium and subject. The works are imbued with thought and concept, while the material dictates form and appearance. Cramer presents photographs from a series that documents found paper in all its simplicity. Side by side the different works speak of divergent histories and a common potential to communicate. Hielscher's continuing investigation of materials as tools in themselves includes several works to provoke a reassessment of the blank page and its dimensions. Vanessa Billy's collages are made of found pages from books, magazines or newspapers. She adds sections of reproduced artworks to images of nature, drawing the viewer's attention to structures and patterns that can be found in both. Katharina Kamph's paper sculptures demonstrate a strong reverence for the elementary material. This and the sculptures' apparent fragility are important ingredients in the artist's quest to focus on one single material while simultaneously exploring all its potential forms.
